COVER STORY

51 E-Business Innovators

By Anne-Christine Strugnell. Everyone is talking about it. But what really constitutes an e-business, and who is reaping the rewards? Among the front-runners taking their business online, retailers have moved beyond setting up Web sites to showcase products, creating systems to help them maintain customer relationships, streamline supply-chain and procurement systems, and capture information for making intelligent e-business decisions. Why not follow the leaders?

52 The Product Is the Service

In the internet marketplace, the key differentiator is service. Technology helps raise the bar.

56 Automate to Scale

Streamlining corporate business processes to keep pace with the speed of the internet.

62 Strategic Success

Collecting, analyzing, and leveraging information to make better business decisions.

64 Changing Rules of Business

How to win in the internet business environment.

66 Reinventing the Middleman

Collaborating directly with partners and customers.

68 Learning from the Data

AMR's Scott Lundstrom explains how to prepare for e-business.

70 Behind the Screens

Fogdog Sports uses interactive marketing and customized Web pages to score big with customers.

72 Benefits & Barriers

Embracing e-business requires overcoming technical and cultural barriers, but the results are worth it.

73 The Oracle Infrastructure

Everything you need for an e-business.

75 XML: Lingua Franca for B2B

XML brings intelligence to the Web by tagging the meaning of data, not just the look.

ORACLE8i

76 Lasting Impressions

By Philip Gill. The Lycos Network sees Oracle8i as key to building customer brand loyalty, market share, and profits. With a collection of Web portals—including the popular Lycos and HotBot internet search engines, MailCity, and WhoWhere.com—success depends on building a loyal following of site visitors.
